Barry Eyes Political Comeback

WASHINGTON | Former D.C. Mayor Marion Barry may be ready to return to politics.

Ward 8 D.C. Council member Sandy Allen said Tuesday the man once known as D.C.'s "mayor for life" called her late last week to announce his intention to challenge her for the Democratic nomination for her seat in September. "He said he didn't like the way government was run," she said.

Barry, 68, won the Ward 8 seat in 1992 after serving time in prison for cocaine possession. He used that seat to return to the mayor's office for his fourth term in 1995.

Barry, who left office in 1999, made a brief attempt to return to the D.C. Council in 2002, but personal problems forced him to suspend the effort. Barry could not be reached for comment. (EXPRESS)

New Iraqi President Selected

Governing Council disbands to let interim body take over

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraqi officials prevailed in their choice for president over the candidate favored by the United States, allowing a U.N. envoy Tuesday to appoint an interim government reflecting Iraq's religious and cultural diversity to preside after the return of sovereignty June 30.

Ghazi Mashal Ajil al-Yawer, a Sunni Muslim critic of the occupation, was named to the largely ceremonial post. Al-Yawer was the choice of the U.S.-picked Iraqi Governing Council, which dissolved itself immediately so that the new government can start work even before it takes power from the American-led coalition at the end of the month.

Al-Yawer

Among its first tasks will be to negotiate a crucial agreement on the status of U.S.-led international forces that will remain in Iraq after sovereignty is restored and to tackle the country's tenuous security situation.

The selection occurred as the U.N. Security Council is debating a U.S.-draft resolution that critics — namely France, Russia and Germany — believe does not go far enough in granting Iraqis genuine power over their own national affairs.

Iraq's foreign minister, Hoshiyar Zebari, was traveling to New York on Tuesday to lobby for greater powers for the new Iraqi government once the occupation ends. HAMZA HENDAWI (AP)

SEAFARIN' Dopes Float

With adventure in their hearts and alcohol in their systems, a group of Dutch students near The Hague nearly did themselves in last week on a post-exams jaunt. The group of 15 to 20 students hopped onto a makeshift raft they built from empty plastic containers, then floated off for a joyride, Reuters reported. The joy ended when they were swept into the North Sea—and needed to be rescued by police. They were let off with a stern warning. (EXPRESS)

ANIMAL WATCH Zebra Roundup

An 8-year-old zebra kicked its way out of a truck at a highway rest stop in Japan on Tuesday. The zebra broke through a wooden gate on the truck after the driver, who was transporting her to a zoo in Kumamoto city, parked to rest just after midnight. The 440-pound, 6½-foot tall animal was on the loose for about five hours before officials from the Kuamoto City Zoo were able to tranquilize her. (AP)

BEAUTY Leg Work

Japanese hair and makeup artist Isako Toshikuni and other contestants focused their talents on the lower limbs in Tokyo on Tuesday during the "Super Leggist" competition, a leg makeup contest. The competition, sponsored by Japanese chemical products maker Nissin Medico Co., is held to promote the company's "Air Stocking," a product that allows users to decorate their legs with a stocking-like substance sprayed from an aerosol can, Reuters reported. The contest winner will demonstrate the makeup in New York, Paris and Shanghai, organizers said. (EXPRESS)

Divers looking for a little extra practice without all the hassles of under-sea life now have a new, deeper training facility to try out. Well, if they don't mind going to Belgium. The Nemo33 diving center in Brussels recently opened a pool that officials say is the world's deepest, allowing divers to swim as deep as 33 meters, or 108 feet. Although the pool was designed as a place for professionals to train, Nemo33 is open to recreational users for a 15-euro ($18.36) entry fee. (EXPRESS)

RELATIONSHIPS Protection Patrol

Feeling frisky but forgot to get condoms? If you're in Sweden, fret not: Protection is on its way. Hoping to increase the awareness of contraception and stem the spread of sexually transmitted diseases, the Swedish Organization for Sexual Education, or RFSU, said last week it plans to deliver condoms by car in a hurry.

Using the name Cho-San Express, the organization will have eight cars loaded with condoms patrolling the streets of the capital, Stockholm, and other cities. The group will deliver a 10-pack of condoms for about $6.66. "It's our hope that the contraceptive will be perceived as a fun sex accessory and not just as a way to protect against infectious, sexually transmitted diseases," spokesman Carl Osvald said. (AP)

U.S.: Padilla Was Part of Bomb Plot

Terror suspect planned to target multi-story buildings, officials say

WASHINGTON | Jose Padilla, a former Chicago gang member held as a terrorism suspect for two years, sought to blow up hotels and apartment buildings in the United States in addition to planning an attack with a "dirty bomb" radiological device, the government said Tuesday.

The Justice Department, under pressure to explain its indefinite detention of a U.S. citizen as an "enemy combatant," detailed Padilla's alleged al Qaeda training in Afghanistan and contacts with the most senior members of the terrorist network, his travel back into the United States and preparations to rent apartments and set off explosives.

The department released documents, based in part on interviews with Padilla, saying he and an unidentified al Qaeda accomplice planned to find as many as three apartment buildings supplied with natural gas.

"They would rent two apartments in each building, seal all the openings, turn on the gas, and set timers to detonate the buildings simultaneously at a later time," the papers alleged.

Top al Qaeda officials "wanted Padilla to hit targets in New York City, although Florida and Washington, D.C., were discussed as well," the summary said.

Federal Judge Blocks Abortion Law

2003 measure outlaws 'partial-birth' procedure

SAN FRANCISCO | In a ruling with coast-to-coast effect, a federal judge declared the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act unconstitutional Tuesday, saying it infringes on a woman's right to choose.

U.S. District Judge Phyllis Hamilton's ruling came in one of three lawsuits challenging the legislation President Bush signed last year.

She agreed with abortion rights activists that a woman's right to choose is paramount, and that it is therefore "irrelevant" whether a fetus suffers pain, as abortion foes contend.

The challenge was brought by the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, and the ruling applies to the nation's 900 or so Planned Parenthood clinics and their doctors, who perform about half the 1.3 million abortions done each year in the United States.

Federal judges in New York and Nebraska also heard challenges to the law earlier this year but have yet to rule.

The law, signed in November, banned a procedure that is known to doctors as intact dilation and extraction, but is called "partial-birth abortion" by abortion foes.

Kerry Eyes Nuke Threats

Candidate outlines plan to reduce nuclear risk during first term

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA. | Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry, outlining a plan to reduce the potential for a nuclear attack by terrorists, promised on Tuesday to safeguard all the nuclear weapons and materials that exist around the world by the end of his first term if elected.

Kerry, speaking at a container port in Florida during an 11-day campaign focus on national security, also pledged to reduce existing nuclear weapons stockpiles, halt production of the materials used to make them and end nuclear weapons programs in nations like North Korea and Iran.

Democratic Sen. John Kerry discusses nuclear threats in Florida on Tuesday. JEFF CHIU/AP

The Massachusetts senator also said he would name a national coordinator for nuclear terrorism and counterproliferation, a Cabinet-level post, to focus on the issue full time.

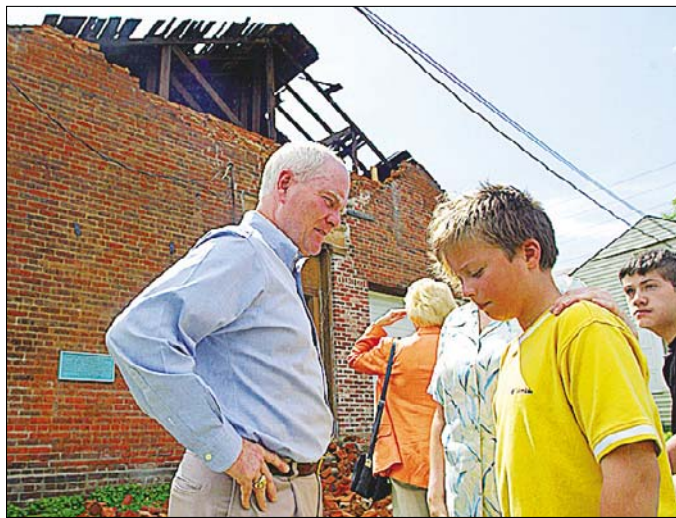

Kerry and senior foreign policy advisers said President Bush has not given the issue the serious treatment it deserves. His campaign said the Bush administration would take 13 years to secure the nearly 20,000 nuclear weapons in the former Soviet Union, while Kerry would complete the job in four years.

Steve Schmidt, a spokesman for Bush's re-election campaign, said Kerry was echoing goals already laid out by the president. "But his failure to accept the success of negotiations with Libya and his criticism of a multilateral approach to confront the threat from North Korea demonstrate that John Kerry can't help but play politics with national security," Schmidt said in a statement. Students' Loan Use On the Rise

WASHINGTON | More full-time students from higher-income families are taking on debt to pay for college, reflecting rising costs and greater loan options.

The share of full-time college students who borrowed to pay for college expenses rose from 30 percent in 1990 to 45 percent in 2000, a federal study released Tuesday shows.

The average loan in 2000 ranged from $5,200 for low-income students to $7,400 for high-income students, covering a range of public and private colleges and universities.

The study focused only on full-time students considered financially dependent on their parents. The greater reliance on loans is tied in part to changes in federal law that raised loan limits and opened unsubsidized federal loans to all students, regardless of financial need.

Among students at the highest end of the income range — from families making $124,600 per year — 35 percent took loans, up from 13 percent in 1990. BEN FELLER (AP)

Court Rules on Juvenile Questioning

WASHINGTON | The Supreme Court refused on Tuesday to require special treatment for young people under questioning by police, ruling narrowly against a 17-year-old interrogated for two hours without being told of his rights.

The decision comes ahead of a high court case this fall on the legalities of executing juvenile killers.

The justices voted 5-4 to reinstate a young man's murder conviction and said police have no obligation to treat younger suspects differently from adults under the 1966 Miranda v. Arizona ruling that led to the warning that begins "You have the right to remain silent."

Police are not required to administer the warning if a suspect isn't under arrest and talks to police. (AP)

U.S., Britain Revise Resolution on Iraq

New draft says that interim government will be 'fully sovereign'

UNITED NATIONS | The United States and Britain circulated a revised resolution on post-occupation Iraq Tuesday that would give the new interim government control over the Iraqi army and police and end the mandate for the multinational force by January 2006 at the latest.

The new draft was introduced at a council meeting just hours after the full composition of the interim government was announced in Baghdad. Russia, France, Germany and other council nations have said they want to see whether this government is acceptable to the more than 20 million Iraqis before they adopt a resolution.

The new draft states that the interim government will be "fully sovereign" and reaffirms the right of the Iraqi people to determine their political future freely, control their natural resources and coordinate international assistance.

The draft notes "that the presence of the multinational force in Iraq is at the request of the incoming interim government." The new interim prime minister, Iyad Allawi, said Tuesday the multinational force will be asked to stay on. (AP)

Court: Liberia Was Haven for al QaedaU.N.-backed probe says ex-leader sheltered known terror figures

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE | Al Qaeda suspects in the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies took shelter in West Africa in the months before the Sept. 11 attacks, converting terror cash into untraceable diamonds, according to the findings of a U.N.-backed court, which were obtained by The Associated Press.

The allegations came as part of the Sierra Leone war crimes court's investigation of former Liberian President Charles Taylor, alleged to have been a middleman between al Qaeda and West Africa's multimillion-dollar diamond trade.

"We have in the process of investigating Charles Taylor ... clearly uncovered that he harbored al Qaeda operatives in Monrovia [the Liberian capital] as late as the summer of 2001," said David Crane, the court's lead prosecutor. "The central thread is blood diamonds."

The operatives — including Mohammed Atef, a top lieutenant of Osama bin Laden who was later killed in Afghanistan — were on the FBI's most-wanted terrorist list in connection with Aug. 7, 1998, car bombings that killed 231 people at U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Taylor is the most prominent suspect indicted by the court, which was established to prosecute alleged crimes against humanity from Sierra Leone's civil war. Taylor is charged with trading guns with and aiding Sierra Leone's insurgency.

U.N. Peacekeepers Take Over in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI | U.N. peacekeepers took command from an American-led multinational force Tuesday, facing uncertainty about troop numbers and funding.

In a symbolic ceremony at the police academy, Brazilian army Gen. Augusto Heleno Ribeiro Pereira took control of the projected 8,000-strong U.N. force, only a fraction of which has arrived. Most of the troops are expected by the end of June, when U.S. forces leave.

Their initial mission will be to provide security, which includes disarming rebels who helped oust President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Feb. 29, and pro-Aristide militants. Both sides have said they will disarm if the other side does, but the U.S.-led troops have collected fewer than 200 weapons.

The handover comes as the country copes with deadly floods that have killed more than 1,700 in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. It was unclear whether new troops would be involved in emergency operations to flooded areas. PAISLEY DODDS (AP)

Evans Holds Off On Stadium Plan

Councilmember nixes idea tying baseball site to development project

WASHINGTON | A D.C. Council member reiterated his stance on Tuesday that he will not back funding for a proposed baseball stadium unless Major League Baseball commits to moving the Montreal Expos to the city.

Finance and Revenue Committee Chairman Jack Evans stressed he will do "absolutely nothing" to promote building or financing a stadium until the city knows it's getting a team.

Evans also decided not to introduce a plan that would connect one of the proposed stadium sites to the redevelopment of the Anacostia waterfront. However, Evans said he is still considering the amendment to a bill creating the Anacostia Waterfront Corp.

Mayor Anthony A. Williams is championing the $8 billion campaign to bring parks, cultural attractions, businesses and homes to the blighted Southeast waterfront area.

Evans

Evans said the amendment would have made it easier to begin developing one of four proposed stadium sites, the Banneker Overlook near L'Enfant Plaza. But it would apply only if baseball commits to bring a team to the District, and only if that stadium site is chosen.

The District is competing with five other jurisdictions — including northern Virginia — to become the new home to the Montreal Expos.

D.C. Starts New Treatment for Water

WASHINGTON | Thousands of homes in Northwest D.C. began receiving newly treated drinking water Tuesday, the first step in efforts to reverse lead contamination in the city's vast water system.

At 9 a.m., a small pumping device started feeding orthophosphate into water being pumped at the Fort Reno pumping station. The station serves about 20,000 homes in a roughly 2.5 square mile area.

Orthophosphate is a corrosion inhibitor which, over time, forms a protective coating inside pipes and fixtures to prevent lead from leaching into drinking water, according to officials from the Washington Aqueduct. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers operates the facility which supplies water to the District and Arlington County and Falls Church, Va.

Lead-lined pipes and plumbing fixtures containing lead are believed to be the source of contamination in the drinking water supply. (AP)

TRANSPORTATION | BUS CRASH

CARRIED AWAY: A worker prepares a Glenelg Country School bus that flipped on its side Tuesday morning in Glenelg, Md., to be towed away. The 14 students who were on the bus were taken to Howard County General Hospital as a precaution.

BY THE NUMBERS: Gov. Mark Warner announced on Tuesday that Virginia will funnel $250,000 in federal funds to the state's Habitat for Humanity program each year for the next three years. The state estimates the $750,000 will help at least 100 families make down payments and closing costs on new Habitat homes. The assessed value of the homes is $111,000 to about $117,000. (AP)

Lawyer Casts Doubts On Slain Children Case

BALTIMORE | An attorney representing a man accused of murdering three young relatives is raising questions about a police translation of a statement that appears to implicate his client.

A judge Tuesday denied bail for Adan Espinoza Canela, 17, and his cousin, Policarpio Espinoza, 22. The suspects, both of whom are originally from Mexico and relied on Spanish-speaking interpreters during the bail review hearing, are each charged with three counts of first-degree murder.

According to charging documents, Espinoza, who was described as a paternal uncle of two of the slain children, told police that Canela was in the apartment Thursday with the children for about 40 minutes. When Espinoza later asked Canela what he did there for so long, Canela said he'd been playing with the children, the documents said.

Canela's attorney, James Rhodes, said outside the courtroom he was

"concerned about the statements allegedly made by the co-defendant. We have questions if those statements were actually made and ... if the translation was correct."

Rhodes declined to answer questions about his client's whereabouts on the day of the killings or why he suspects the translation may be inaccurate.

Baltimore Police Department spokesman Matt Jablow said, "We have no reason to believe there were any errors made in the translation."

Viacom President Resigns

Media conglomerate taps CBS, MTV execs to succeed Karmazin

MEDIA | Mel Karmazin, one of the most highly regarded executives in the media industry, resigned suddenly as the No. 2 executive at Viacom Inc., the media conglomerate that owns CBS and MTV.

He was replaced by two senior Viacom executives, CBS head Leslie Moonves and MTV chief Tom Freston, the company announced Tuesday. The moves clear the way for either Freston or Moonves to succeed CEO Sumner Redstone, who is 81 years old.

Given years of rumored friction between Redstone and Karmazin, it was not clear that Karmazin would succeed Redstone, who has promised to step down in three years.

Redstone, speaking in a conference call with Wall Street analysts, stressed that no one at Viacom had asked Karmazin to resign. He said Karmazin left because of "frustration" with the company's sagging stock price and issues with the company's struggling radio division.

Redstone suggested Viacom would consider getting rid of the radio business. Karmazin worked in radio for much of his career, and is known to be close to several of Viacom's radio personalities, including Howard Stern and Don Imus.

Karmazin did not return calls to his office for comment. He said in a brief statement that "for personal and professional reasons, I have decided to leave Viacom and pursue other challenges." SETH SUTEL (AP)

Oil Prices Rise Another $2

ENERGY | Oil prices surged more than $2 a barrel and finished at a record level Tuesday.

The attack against two oil company compounds in Saudi Arabia on Saturday that killed 22 people — the second such incident in the country in one month — solidified traders' fears that terrorists intend to target oil industry infrastructure and workers in an effort to disrupt the global supply chain.

These concerns have propped up prices $5 per barrel or more in recent months even though supplies have not been affected.

Oil futures settled well above $42 on Tuesday to a new high, although when inflation is taken into account crude is not as expensive today as it was during the energy crisis more than 20 years ago. (AP)

THE FEAR FACTOR

SOME ECONOMISTS SAY that as much as $15 is being added to the cost of every barrel of crude oil because of fear that terror attacks could disrupt supplies.

Energy economists estimate that an additional $1 in the cost of crude adds 2.4 cents to the retail price of gasoline. This means that motorists may be paying as much as 36 cents a gallon more at the pump because of the petroleum industry's anxieties. (AP)

KOBE BRYANT CASE

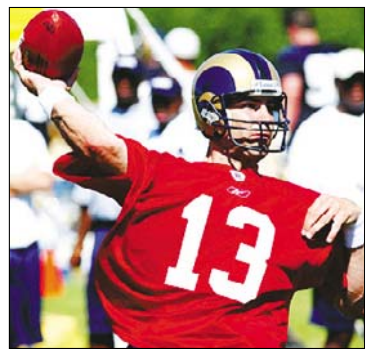

Judge Rules Out Referring To Accuser as 'Victim' in Trial

Participants in Kobe Bryant's trial will be prohibited from using the term "victim" to describe the woman accusing the NBA star of rape. In a ruling made public on Tuesday, state District Judge Terry Ruckriegle said he agreed with Bryant's lawyers that the term implies guilt and should not be used at trial. He said she must be referred to by name; or in jury instructions, where she must be referred to as "person." (AP)

Rams Cut Ties With Warner

Kurt Warner's storybook stay with the St. Louis Rams ended Tuesday, but he's unlikely to be out of work for long. The release of the two-time NFL MVP, who led the Rams to two Super Bowls, leaves Marc Bulger as the team's No. 1 quarterback. Bulger took over as the starter after Warner fumbled six times in last year's season opener. Coincidentally, that game was against the New York Giants, the team likely to sign Warner to ease Eli Manning's transition to the NFL. (AP)

His two MVPs just a memory, Kurt Warner was cut by the Rams Tuesday.

Capitals Re-Sign 2 Players

The Washington Capitals re-signed right wing Jonas Johansson and left wing Tomas Fleischmann to three-year contracts Tuesday. Both players are 20-year-old 2002 draft picks, who were acquired in trades during the team's fire sale last season. Johansson and Bates Battaglia arrived in the deal that sent Steve Konowalchuk and a third-round draft pick to Colorado in October. Fleischmann and a first-round selection were acquired from Detroit for Robert Lang in February. (AP)

GOODBYE GIRLS: Twenty-eight minutes after Serena Williams lost Tuesday, Venus Williams dropped her match at the French Open.

Williamsses Sent Packing

Capriati becomes favorite after upset of Serena

FRENCH OPEN | Venus Williams peered through the rain drops at the Day-Glo yellow letters and numbers dotting the black scoreboard.

First came an unwanted reminder: She was losing her French Open quarterfinal. Then, like an airport's schedule board, the digits flipped, revealing more bad news: Her sister Serena, seeded second, was gone already, beaten 6-3, 2-6, 6-3 by Jennifer Capriati across the grounds on center court.

Not much later, No. 4 Venus swatted a soggy, clay-caked ball wide for the last of 43 unforced errors, allowing Anastasia Myskina of Russia to wrap up a 6-3, 6-4 upset.

Never before had the Williams sisters been eliminated in the same round at a tournament; it happened in a span of 28 minutes Tuesday.

"We're going to pack our bags and leave," said Venus. "There's nothing left for us here anymore. We're going home."

Seeded No. 7, Capriati now assumes the role of favorite. The other three women own a combined total of one previous major semifinal appearance: No. 6 Myskina, No. 9 Elena Dementieva of Russia and No. 14 Paola Suarez of Argentina, a 6-1, 6-3 winner against Maria Sharapova. HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

A MAN'S GAME

Two of the men's semifinalists at the French Open were determined on Tuesday:

→ Tim Henman, who had never reached the quarterfinals of any major tournament besides Wimbledon, became the first Englishman in 41 years to reach the semifinals at Roland Garros by beating Juan Ignacio Chela 6-2, 6-4, 6-4. His opponent Friday will be third-seeded Guillermo Coria, who beat 1998 champion Carlos Moya 7-5, 7-6 (3), 6-3. Coria has yet to lose a set in the tournament. (AP)

New Name, But Same Old Kemper

Major stars haven't committed to play in Booz Allen Classic

GOLF | The tents are going up instead of coming down at the TPC at Avenel course. It's early June, and the PGA Tour's yearly visit is usually done by now.

But the tournament long known as the Kemper Open is still four weeks away. Tuesday's annual media day, which normally would feature the defending champion, instead focused on the event's new date and new name: the Booz Allen Classic, which will be held June 24-27.

However, a name change can't help a golf tournament if it doesn't have a good field of players, and that's where this event has struggled. The tournament has a reputation for producing first-time tour winners, which make for good human interest stories but not banner headlines.

No one on the current top 10 money list has committed to play

Malone 4 Wins From First Title

NBA PLAYOFFS | Ankle-deep in a bucket of cold water and ice strapped to his aging knees, Karl Malone finally had a chance to sit back and relax.

Not that he was ready to take advantage of the opportunity. Not yet, anyway.

Malone established himself as the best power forward ever during 18 seasons with the Utah Jazz. But he joined the Los Angeles Lakers last summer to try to win the one prize he lacked — a championship.

So pardon Malone if he's hesitant to get too comfortable even though he helped put the Lakers back in the NBA Finals.

"I've been there twice and I've had to go home with a bad taste in my mouth," Malone said after the Lakers beat the Minnesota Timberwolves 96-90 on Monday night to win the Western Conference finals. "I've been here before. I haven't done anything yet."

The Jazz reached the NBA Finals in 1997 and 1998, but they lost to the Michael Jordan-led Chicago Bulls both times.

At 40, Malone wanted so much to be on a championship team that he took an $18 million pay cut to sign with the Lakers for $1.5 million.

Was it worth it? "Absolutely," he replied. JOHN NADEL (AP)

Tight Series Continues

NHL PLAYOFFS | Three times before in these Stanley Cup playoffs the Calgary Flames were 2-2 in a series.
Three times they went on the road and won, then took the series.

Twice before in these playoffs,
the Tampa Bay Lightning played a pivotal Game 5. They won both, once to end a series and the other time to take control of it.

So is it any surprise the Flames and Lightning go into Thursday night's Game 5 of their tight Stanley Cup final tied, with Tampa Bay holding home-ice advantage but neither team really in control?

"I don't look at what number the game is," Lightning coach John

Lightning goalie Nikolai Khabibulin shut out Calgary in Monday's Game 4.

Tortorella said Tuesday. "It's Game 5, and it's exactly what it is. It's the first of three and we're looking to get to four [victories]." (AP)

Mark Burnett changed the face of television — so what does he watch?

PIONEERS | As the 2003-04 television season draws to a close, no one has more to crow about than producer Mark Burnett, the man behind "Survivor," "The Apprentice" and "The Restaurant." He trail-blazed a path for the reality genre that is reshaping prime-time TV.

Why do you think "The Apprentice" worked so well?

Both "The Apprentice" and "Survivor" have something in common, which is dealing with the emotional pull that all humans feel from being excluded from something. Both of those shows take that feeling of exclusion to a level of death. When you're fired, or in the case of "Survivor," when the torch goes out, it's like being killed.

Why do you think the reality genre is stealing the spotlight from scripted TV so often these days?

In comparing them to scripted shows, it's the unpredictable nature of these type of shows that's important to the audience. In "CSI," you very well know that Gil Petersen won't be dying this week and that they will solve the case. That's what made the room for an unpredictable show like ours.

"Not to put anybody down," but some shows are simply done for the shock value ... I've tried to build franchises that would become kind of a living thing."

REALITY TELEVISION PIONEER MARK BURNETT

How much of the drama is created in the edit bay?

We create situations. Were I to wait for 16 people to happen to be shipwrecked, I'd be waiting a long time to do a show. Not to put anybody down, but some shows are simply done for the shock value. "Littlest Groom" is not something you're going to watch again. I've tried to build franchises that would become kind of a living thing.

"The Restaurant" was a departure for you in not having a formal competitive game built into the show.

It's really much harder to make that. You don't have the building blocks of finale or challenges and tasks and setups. You're only filling up the drama around the set pieces. "The Restaurant" is 44 minutes of unscripted drama, and it is absolutely the hardest to do.

What do you like on TV these days? Do you watch your competition?

I like "Alias," and I like "24" a lot in terms of dramas. I'm very sad at the end of "Sex and the City." I'm sad at the end of "Friends." Those are great, great shows. I like "Law & Order." I think "ER" is still brilliant ... I love "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy." I think it's absolutely great. I like "Joe Schmo." CYNTHIA LITTLETON (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

Byrne, Baby, Byrne: Backwards Living

The man who made "quirky" a pop byword brings his "My Backwards Life" tour to the Birchmere for the second of a three-night run. David Byrne sings weird songs about food, buildings and love; the Tosca Strings back him up. We enjoy.

Birchmere Music Hall, 3701 Mount Vernon Ave., Alexandria; 7:30 p.m., $50; 703-549-7500.

After a certain age, a man shouldn't have to be described as "quirky."

'Blue Room': Theater in La Ronde

David Hare's "The Blue Room," better known as "that play from London in which the leading lady gets naked," deals with permutations of love among various characters, all played by only two actors.

Signature Theatre, 3806 S. Four Mile Run Drive, Arlington; through July 11, 7:30 p.m., $22-$36; 703-820-9771.

Mountain High: T-Bone's Hoedown

T-Bone Burnett affixed the public ear on the American roots music he loves and now has a cottage industry bringing bluegrass, gospel and country to the people live. Alison Krauss and Union Station headline his "Great High Mountain Tour."

Wolf Trap, 1645 Trap Road, Vienna; 7:30 p.m., $25-$45; 703-218-6500.

Cardigans: Good Fit

The Swedish quintet graduates from fluffy pop to deft maturity

MUSIC | Sweden has had a reputation for pop songs since Abba blazed a global trail in 1974.

But often overlooked in the three decades since the quartet's ascension and demise has been the steady stream of artists whose only similarity to the supergroup is geography.

The Cardigans, thankfully, have never had that problem. Since the group's breakout hit "Lovefool" hit worldwide airwaves thanks to its placement on the soundtrack to Baz Luhrman's "Romeo + Juliet," the band has garnered a global fan base.

The quintet's latest LP, "Long Gone Before Daylight" (Stockholm Records), marks a turning point for the combo, moving away from pop-oriented singles with a bent for the inane and instead focusing on the nitty-gritty of relationships, friendships and more.

Where previous efforts like "Gran Turismo" were a bit edgier and early efforts like 1994's "Emmerdale" were light and breezy, the fifth album is a deft blend of soft, melancholic reflections and pounding, driving odes to love.

The leadoff single, "For What It's Worth," has a steady beat and finely tuned rhythm line that keeps it barreling along like a freight train without any brakes.

The entire LP is like re-establishing contact with an old friend, one who, despite the years, has changed for the best.

The same goes for the band, too. MATT MOORE (AP)

'Rabid' Rampage

RE-INFECTIONS | Film director David Cronenberg is going down memory lane as he gears up for the DVD release of his 1977 feature film "Rabid."

Perhaps better known for his other eerie pictures "The Fly," "Dead Ringers" and "Crash," Cronenberg said the experience of shooting "Rabid" was part of an intense process of learning his craft.

"I learned everything. Those films, 'Shivers' and 'Rabid,' were my film school, because I never went to film school," Cronenberg said.

One "Rabid" filming lesson had a particularly dangerous learning curve when a careening motorcycle almost landed on the director during a stunt.

In the film, Marilyn Chambers's character suffers a motorcycle crash and emerges from a medical clinic as a modern-day vampire after radical plastic surgery goes horribly wrong. Infected crazies then lay siege to an entire city.

Cronenberg

The DVD contains a director's commentary, an interview with Cronenberg, a wide-screen format, a theatrical trailer and a photo gallery of production stills. It goes on sale Tuesday. (AP)

'Pride' Heading for a Fall

BOMBS | Silence greeted the NBC sales presentation to Madison Avenue as clips of "Father of the Pride," an animated comedy based on Roy Horn and Siegfried Fischbacher's magic act, failed to draw laughs.

In a New York minute, bad buzz had started humming for one of NBC's highest-profile fall series.

"King of the Pride" is DOA," was the headline the following day in an online newsletter distributed by industry analyst Jack Myers.

The comedy represents a high-stakes gamble as part of the prime-time animation genre that, aside from a few Fox shows like "The Simpsons," has largely flopped. It's also costly, at up to a reported $2.5 million per episode.

NBC isn't conceding any weakness in the series or its chances of success, according to Jeff Zucker, president of the NBC Universal Television Group.

But he acknowledged a marketing misstep at the annual "upfront" presentation, which allows media-buying firms and advertisers to peek at new series before placing preseason orders for ad time.

"I think we did a very poor job

John Goodman and Carl Reiner play lions on the badly received "Pride."

of putting the clips together at the upfront, and I think that didn't work and that was our fault," he said. "But the fact is that anyone who has seen the show as a whole ... the reaction is fantastic."

After screening four completed episodes, he said, the network ordered the final "back nine" scripts of a full 22-episode order.

"With all due respect, none of those [post-upfront] comments matter. What matters is when they see the show as a whole," Zucker said. LYNN ELBER (AP)

CBS's Color Line

DIVERSITY | Lourdes Colon and Veronica Diaz were counting on making their Carnegie Hall debuts last month, when CBS executives introduced their upcoming fall prime-time lineup.

The Carnegie Hall unveiling was part of a gala weeklong presentation to advertisers in New York by broadcast TV networks vying for upfront purchase of commercial time on new and returning shows.

The actresses' hopes were boosted after executives, impressed by a CBS-sponsored showcase for Latino actors last October, signed them to exclusive talent deals binding them to the network. Novice performers are rarely signed to such agreements.

But when the casts of the CBS lineup schmoozed with advertisers, Colon and Diaz were not among them. Their deals are scheduled to expire this month.

CBS remains the only major broadcast network without a minority actor in a leading or secondary lead role in any of its series, five years after the lack of cultural diversity on prime time was first blasted by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and several other ethnic advocacy groups.

Fern Orenstein, CBS's vice president of casting, said her network is committed to the Latino showcases.

"There's no question that the showcases are working, because we see the results and so many of these people would not have been seen otherwise," Orenstein said.

The first hybrid SUV is expected in August

DRIVING GREEN | Gas-stingy, hybrid-powered vehicles are about to go off-road.

Ford Motor Co. plans this summer to become the world's first automaker to sell a full-powered hybrid sport utility vehicle, one that combines an electric motor and a gas-powered engine to provide increased power with improved fuel economy.

Dealers expect the 2005 Escape Hybrid, a four-cylinder, gas-electric version of Ford's popular mid-sized Escape SUV, to show up in their showrooms by August.

Ford has not announced mileage figures for the Escape Hybrid, but early word from company insiders is that it will get 35 to 40 miles per gallon, versus an EPA rating of 22 mpg city and 25 on the highway for a standard four-cylinder Escape. The hybrid SUV is expected to have a base sticker price of about $27,000, or $3,500 more than a comparable Escape model.

With a 133-horsepower gas-powered engine and a 94-horsepower electric motor, the Escape — available in both four-wheel and two-wheel drive — is expected to post acceleration, top speed and hauling capacity equal to a 200-horsepower, V-6 powered gasoline Escape. "It's a no-compromises hybrid," said Tom Watson, head of powertrain development for Ford.

The Escape is Ford's effort to capitalize on the popularity of SUVs and hybrids. American automakers have prospered in SUV sales, LITE SUV: The 2005 Ford Escape Hybrid is rumored to get 35 to 40 miles per gallon.

but have ceded the hybrid market to the Japanese.

Even before the recent run-up in gas prices, hybrids had been popular, particularly in California where the bulk of sales take place. So far, the only full-powered hybrid vehicles available to consumers in the United States have been smaller models, the Toyota Prius sedan, Honda Civic Hybrid and two-seat Honda Insight.

Among U.S. automakers, General Motors Corp. already is selling Chevy Silverado pickups with a so-called mild hybrid system that enables the gas engine to shut off at stop signs, but doesn't permit all-electric operation.

Some critics have lampooned GM's first passenger hybrid because it improves gas mileage only by a couple of miles per gallon. GM won't have a full-powered hybrid vehicle until 2007.

Other American hybrids scheduled to be introduced in the next few years are a Dodge Ram pickup, a Mercury SUV and a mid-sized sedan from Ford.

Being first to market with a true SUV hybrid is important to Ford, which has come under fire from environmental groups for its reliance on gas-guzzling large pickups and sport utilities.

Ford expects to sell only about 20,000 Escape Hybrids a year, versus 165,000 conventional Escapes and almost 1 million F-150 pickups a year. JOHN O'DELL (L.A. TIMES)

Car Care

Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World, Inc., a local car repair company. He chats regularly on washingtonpost.com/cars.

The garage at my apartment building has been leaking water mixed with plaster and/or paint on my car. It refuses to go away even after numerous applications of bug and tar removers and Meguiar's Scratch X. Is there anything else you suggest?

Try one of the products designed for removing calcium deposits in household sinks and showers. Try it in an inconspicuous spot first.

I just had my windshield replaced on my Saturn L300 for the second time in nine months (it was hit by a stone). I drove Tauruses for 12 years and never had a windshield crack from a stone. Are some cars more prone to this problem?

Absolutely. Has to do with aerodynamics and the way air flows over the front of the vehicle.

I noticed some garages' mechanics are "ASE-certified." What does this mean?

ASE is a testing organization that tests a technician's ability and knowledge to perform certain basic repairs. If you're looking for brake repairs, select a technician certified in brakes, for example. Take that a step further and look for an ASE Blue Seal of Excellence certified shop.

Driven to Downsize

FUEL | As gas prices hit new records, there are signs that motorists may be downsizing — at least a bit.

Sales of the largest SUVs dived last month from the previous April, according to research firm Autodata Corp., which tracks sales nationwide: Ford Expeditions dropped 34 percent, Lincoln Navigators were down 25 percent, and Chevrolet Suburbans drew 21 percent fewer buyers.

Overall SUV sales continue to climb, up 2.5 percent last month over the previous April, largely due to the soaring popularity of smaller, more fuel-efficient SUVs.

Car experts say it's too soon to conclude that high gas prices will cut into sales of the largest SUVs over the long run. But transportation-industry analysts say that if gas prices stay high, the "bigger is better" mentality could give way to a thriftier attitude.

"We expect to see a shift from big trucks to little trucks, and from big cars to little cars," said Ron Tadross, an auto-industry analyst.

"The longer these prices persist and the higher they go, ultimately they're going to become a problem," said Bob Schnorbus, chief economist for the automotive-market research group J.D. Power and Associates. "We need to be watching this closely."

TWINS
They Might Have to Give One of Them a Normal Name

Oscar-winning actress JULIA ROBERTS is pregnant with twins, according to magazine reports. People magazine reported Monday that Roberts's spokeswoman said the star was due to give birth to twins early next year. US Weekly said Roberts, 36, has been pregnant for about nine weeks with twins. People reported that twins run in Roberts's family, with her great-grandmother and a pair of cousins born as twins. (AP)

Tell the One About Achilles Again, Brad!

BRAD PITT shared a light moment with director STEVEN SODERBERGH during a break in filming an arrest scene for "Ocean's 12" at Rome's famous Piazza Navona on Tuesday. The movie is the sequel to the 2001 heist fantasy "Oceans 11"; not surprisingly, Pitt still plays card shark Rusty Ryan. (AP)

When Hotties Speak, World Powers Listen

A host of celebrities have signed an open letter to Prime Minister Tony Blair urging him to boost Britain's aid to the world's poorest countries. In a letter released Wednesday, movie stars and musicians, including Bono, JUDE LAW and Minnie Driver, insisted Britain must increase its aid budget to above next year's target of 0.4 percent of national income. Other celebrities who signed include Colin Firth, Joseph Fiennes and Coldplay frontman Chris Martin. (AP)

LOSERS
Beauty Trumps Brains

Less than two months after getting fired by Donald Trump on the reality show "The Apprentice," runner-up KWAME JACKSON got the boot again — as a judge for Trump's Miss Universe pageant. Jackson was disqualified by pageant organizers for waving at beauty queens he bumped into in the lobby of their hotel. The pageant statement quoted Jackson saying he was "disappointed and disheartened" and "honestly had no idea that [the hotel] was off limits." (AP)

An Unstoppable Force Meets a Jiggly Object

BRITNEY SPEARS's first China tour has received Culture Ministry approval, but officials want to know what she's wearing, the official China News Service reported Tuesday. Officials have asked the concert's organizers to guarantee she doesn't show too much skin on stage. "Relevant departments will carry out strict reviews of Britney Spears's performance clothing," the report said. The concert's Chinese organizers said Spears's outfits are the same at each tour stop and it would be "impossible to make up clothes specially for the China performances." (AP)

TALENTS
Calm Down, People, It's Not Tony-Time Yet

HUGH JACKMAN, who plays Australian entertainer Peter Allen in "The Boy From Oz," and Donna Murphy, star of "Wonderful Town," have won the 2004 TDF-Astaire Awards as the best male and female dancers on Broadway, it was announced Tuesday. Kathleen Marshall, who directed and choreographed "Wonderful Town," was named best choreographer. (AP)

OH, THE FOLLY OF YOUTH: The 23-year-old Jessica Simpson believes that when her upcoming summer tour is over, the attention will again center on her music, not her television career — even though a giant TV screen will depict moments from "Newlyweds" as she sings. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

A WORLD WAR II veteran flashing two fingers ("WWII Veterans Parade Through D.C.," June 1) and passing in front of U.S. troops is not giving "the peace sign," as your caption stated, but rather indicating "V" for victory. In his day, vets participated in victory parades, not peace demonstrations.

AN ARTICLE IN FRIDAY'S Express on the movie "Soul Plane" was titled "A Takeoff That Doesn't." Well, to an educated black man who loves movies and goes to the theaters every week, the movie took off and landed safely. I'm tired of people who have no clue about what African-Americans like or think is good on the big screen telling us what to think.

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You'll very likely gravitate toward those who share your feelings about a highly volatile, controversial issue. You'll be able to make friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Take it one thing at a time and you'll be amazed how quickly you are able to dispense with all of your major duties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may find it difficult to communicate openly with a loved one or co-worker. There is more to this dilemma than meets the eye.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Don't allow mistrust to rule the day. You have it in your power to develop harmony among those usually at odds with each other.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You'll be able to see through others when they are departing from the truth — and you will be transparent as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You'll encounter many people who say much but do little. Get an early start and you'll certainly be able to show them up in little time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Social activities not only increase in number, but they bring more opportunities to increase pleasure and profit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Spend some time alone to recharge your emotional and spiritual batteries. You've been too willing to get caught up in the grind lately.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Time spent waiting around is not necessarily time wasted. You can put your brainpower to use and increase your profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — What you want can be yours, but you must not make the mistake of thinking that it will come to you without making an effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You may find yourself vacillating between two primary choices, unsure exactly which will get you the results you most desire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You'll fare better at thinking things up than at putting those schemes into motion. Leave the hands-on efforts to those you most trust.

Ben Franklin

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

GORDON S. WOOD, author of "The Americanization of Benjamin Franklin," was online Tuesday and discussed Franklin as founding father, American folk hero and reluctant revolutionary.

Do you think students today know as much as they should about the American Revolution in general and about the Founding Fathers in particular?

From the polls I have read, many students don't know about the founding era. I read that more students know who the Three Stooges are than the three parts of American government, so I think students need more knowledge.

Would you characterize Franklin as a reluctant revolutionary? The man did seem to take his time coming around to the cause of independence.

I would think he was a reluctant revolutionary. He admired the British Empire and strove right up to the end to hold it together. He came to the revolution late, but because he was humiliated by the British government at the end, he came to the revolution with a vengeance.

My question is about the portrayal of Franklin in David McCullough's biography of John Adams. I was surprised to read in his book that Franklin was something of a lazy, womanizing gladhandler in France when he and Adams were there together. Was he as unproductive as all that or does he just look bad compared to John Adams?

There is no doubt that Adams was a hard worker, but diplomacy is not based on getting up early in the morning and working hard; it is based on personal relationships, and Franklin had that with the chief minister of France. If the relationship between America and France had been left to John Adams, we might never have won the revolution.
